

THE UNPAINTED MURAL

- AN EXALTED FAN-PROJECT -

TEASER #1

Hello folks and welcome to our first Teaser for the Unpainted Mural!

We've got some goodies for you today, and without much preamble let's delve right in.

The Black Rose Empress

by Ryan Lowe, artist for The Unpainted Mural

Comissioned by our own Ryan (not the same as the artist), this picture is intended to give you something to go on regarding the quality of our desired artwork.

The work depicts a canonical character in a somewhat less-canonical situation: The Roseblack after her ascension to the throne of the Scarlet Empire. Together with her Legion and other supporters she managed to take the reins of the Empire into her own capable hands, and now she stands ready...

In case you ever wanted the Roseblack to win the bid for the throne, there you go. Wish fulfilled! May it serve a campaign or two in the future as visual reference point!

But today is not just about the art itself, about the great artists we've already spoken to, but about a bit of the procedure. A number of fans have expressed concerns about how we would decide which pieces of art would be comissioned. Rather than commission things for ourselves (which would run counter to the project's goals) we instead hand over creative control to the community at large:
